EXPECT INITIATION OF CONFERENCE FOR 'PEACEFUL NATIONS'

In Determined Drive to Halt Sino-Japanese Conflict and Spanish War

NEW FOREIGN POLICY

Is implication of President's Speech Enunciating Such

By Robert G. Nixon

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6—(INS)—President Roosevelt is expected to initiate a world conference of "peaceful" nations in the near future in a determined drive to halt the Sino-Japanese conflict and the civil war in Spain, responsible quarters declared today.

This, it was asserted, was the full implication of the President's profound speech enunciating a new foreign policy at Chicago yesterday.

The world conference, with Washington or Geneva as its locale, loomed as a distinct possibility unless definite results are accomplished toward halting the "epidemic of world lawlessness" by the present session of the League of Nations assembly at Geneva.

Armed intervention in either the Far Eastern or Spanish conflicts is not thought of—in fact President Roosevelt pledged he will keep America out of war—but these drastic steps were considered the only possible means of restoring peace, short of outside nations enforcing it by resort to arms:

1. Demand by the world's "peaceful" nations that Japan and China cease fighting and their differences be settled by peaceful arbitration.

2. That all foreign troops be withdrawn from Spain.

If these demands, backed by nearly 50 nations, should fail then these nations should:

1. Clamp a world-wide iron-clad economic boycott on all commercial or financial intercourse with the "aggressor" in the Sino-Japanese undeclared war and the interventionist nations in the Spanish civil war.

No nation, international experts pointed out, can live for long, particularly under the stress of prosecuting a war, without obtaining large quantities of essential supplies from the outside world.

The reported plan would, in effect, be a substitute for the League of Nations, of which the United States is not a member, and which has failed in its original purpose of halting wars because its members have refused to unify on a threat of overwhelming armed force against any aggressor.

While the plan would entail sacrifice of commerce by the nations with the aggressor, if it should fail to heed the warning to halt its wars, this would be far less a sacrifice than that of armed force.

The League's advisory committee has branded Japan the aggressor in the Far Eastern conflict and Italy, in particular and Germany have been accused of intervening on the side of the insurgents in Spain.

In his speech, President Roosevelt called for a world "quarantine" of nations infected with an "epidemic of world lawlessness" to prevent "spread of the disease."

The President's speech was interpreted in official quarters as definitely embarking the United States on a new international policy calling for closer co-operation with other peace-loving nations in out-lawing war.

High officials believed it more likely, however, the United States would discourage invocation of the nine-power pact and would throw its support into the summoning of all non-aggressive nations into full action on any consideration of moral or economic action against the offending warring countries.

ANTICIPATE A BILLION DOLLAR RETURN ON FAIR

Attractive Rate of Interest Expected By Sponsors Of Exposition

THE GOLD GATE FAIR

(Note: This is the third of five articles giving an advance view of the 1939 Golden Gate Exposition to be held on Treasure Island in San Francisco Bay.)

By Lee Rashall
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 6—(INS)—Fifty million dollars investment. One billion dollars return.

That is the attractive rate of interest which sponsors of the Golden Gate International Exposition expect their big show to earn for the West.

A stimulant for Pacific and western commerce, the development of which it will signalize, this exposition is fully expected to leave a golden wake of one billion dollars in the eleven western states in 1939.

Financial statisticians predict that the enlivened movement of currency induced by the exposition as a tourist attraction will shoot the 1939 business graph to a new western high, with the presumed prospect that it will remain at a higher level.

The lure of the Pacific coast and the western states paid enormous dividends in 1936, when tourists spent approximately $750,000,000, records show.

On the basis of tourist expenditures in that and past years, those whose business it is to chart the flow of money through a nation forsee the surprising total of one billion dollars.

Conservative estimates say 20,000,000 visitors will come to the exposition. It is estimated each one will spend an average of $2.50 on Treasure Island, or a total of $50,000,000. This is the exact cost of the fair itself.

But this will be a fractional part of the total tourist patronage, retailers, hotels and resorts coming in for their large share.

Additional thousands will likely be expended by exhibitors, with an eye to direct advertising, who are preparing scientific and educational exhibits of their products.

More millions are expected to remain in the West because of the belief the exposition will provide a proving ground to demonstrate the increasing power facilities and population factors of the West, making it an ideal point for industry's expansion.

It is generally conceded that in the Pacific lie the future markets of

Ready for Series to Open

New York, Oct. 6—While baseball's annual series tightened its grip from the Battery to the Bronx, the weather man waved his wand today to dissolve rain-soaked clouds that have threatened postponement of the inaugural World Series contest between the Yankees, world champions, and the fighting Giants, who hold the National League title. Inclement conditions had prevailed throughout the early morning hours, but shortly before 9 a. m. the sun broke through the clouds, sweeping away a misty fog.

The massive Yankee stadium was pretty and prim like a deb at her coming-out party, with flags and bunting decorating the top tier of seats, and flashing color over the choice box seats.

The stage was set for baseball followers, and fans by the five subways were pouring into town early to witness the series inaugural.

The Giants pin their fate on the pitching arm of left-handed Carl Hubbell, master of control, possessor of the knack for designing the weakness of opposing batters.

Hubbell's opponent will be Lefty Gomez, whose terrific speed played a large part in bringing the championship of their league to the Yankees once again.

The Yankees are odds on, probably because of their slugging prowess.

The great, the former great, and next great will be on hand by the scores, for the opening of the series—not forgetting the humble crowd who will make the contest a financial success. Postmaster Jim Farley is coming up from Washington. Former President Herbert Hoover will attend. So, too, will Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan's favorite Republican son.

MID-COUNTY SOCCER LEAGUE JOINS CONFERENCE

Voted Into Membership At Meeting Held In Langhorne

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

By Louis Tomlinson

LANGHORNE, Oct. 6—In first meeting of the Lower Bucks County coaches at Langhorne in the high school, for the year 1937-38, they decided to allow the newly formed soccer league to come under their jurisdiction under the name of Lower Bucks County Soccer League.

The teams composing the league from Bucks County withdrew this year from the Tri-County league, which consisted of teams from Philadelphia, Montgomery and Bucks counties, to form their own league, in order to cut down traveling expenses for their schools which couldn't support the team under such heavy expense. These teams, Southampton, Richboro, New Hope, Yardley and Buckingham, met in the Richboro High School to form their own league of just Bucks County schools. Last night at the tri-annual meeting of the Lower Bucks County coaches they applied for entrance into the Lower Bucks County Conference as a soccer league. Their main purpose in joining the Conference is to have a governing body to settle any disputes arising out of referee's judgment or misinterpretation of rules, etc. At the same time they wished to supply a Conference trophy to the winning school.

The newly formed league is already in progress, having started their campaign Friday. The teams will play an eight game schedule with each team meeting the other twice—once home and once away. The League is open to all Bucks County schools who desire to enter and it is hoped the league will increase in number and popularity. However, the schools must now belong to the Lower Bucks County Conference in order to join the circuit. The coaches of the schools represented in the soccer circuit are anxious to have someone handle their disputes and interpret rules and they were glad to have been accepted into the Lower Conference.

Another result of the meeting was the agreement of the coaches to allow the girls' sports to come under the heading of the Lower Bucks County

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1937, by The Baltimore Sun)

He Just Let It Blow

IN politics the ability to ride out a storm depends upon a number of things, among them the velocity of the wind, the personality of the politician and the state of the public mind. Some can do it; some can't.

—o—

AN example of one who adroitly let the wind blow itself out with no damage whatever to himself is found in the ample person of Mr. James A. Farley, soon, it is now admitted, to retire as Postmaster General in order to accept a large and lucrative office in the automobile business. Whether or not this position, which is reported to carry an annual salary of $100,000 a year, to say nothing of bonus agreements and a certain amount of stock, makes an economic royalist of Mr. Farley, it certainly heavily adds to the not inconsiderable evidence that, while the New Dealers close to the President lose few chances to denounce economic royalists, in the last analysis they have no objection to being paid by them.

—o—

IT IS NOT too much to say that a certain eagerness along these lines has been evinced by some of them. At any rate, the list of those who one way or another are cashing in on their Administration connections grows impressively. The case of Mr. Farley differs from a good many others, first, because next to the late Forbes Morgan, uncle by marriage of the President and Treasurer of the Democratic Committee, Mr. Farley apparently has made a better deal for more money than any other of the official stars; and, second, because he was for so long under fire from the critics of the Administration and even from some of its friends, like Senator George Norris, of Nebraska.

—o—

IT MAY BE recalled that the particular reason Mr. Farley became a target was because of the dual role he played as Postmaster Gen-

PAROLE TWO NEGROES; SERVED MINIMUM TERM

Both Had Pleaded Guilty To The Illegal Manufacture of Alcohol

NOT THE FIRST ARREST

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 6—Two Negroes, Henry Campbell and Benny Campbell, both of Philadelphia, were granted paroles by Judge Calvin S. Boyer on Monday.

Both defendants were sentenced June 3 to serve not less than four months nor more than one year in the County Prison following pleading guilty before the Court on a charge of unlawful manufacture of alcohol.

The Negroes were arrested in connection with the large still which was raided in the attic in the farmhouse on the farm of Israel Meltzer, near Newtown.

"You two men look big and husky enough to earn your living in an honest way. I hope that this was a lesson to you and that you keep out of shady business in the future," said Judge Boyer.

Judge Boyer warned them about their conduct for the balance of their sentence, which will be probationary period of eight months, and appointed Sheriff Horace E. Gwinner parole officer.

Henry Campbell admitted to the Court that he has been in trouble once before and served time. He is the father of two youngsters.

Benny Campbell told the Court he also served time once before on a charge of carrying a gun, and that he was the father of two children and the sole support of his mother.

SPEAKS OF GROWTH OF SEASCOUTING IN BUCKS COUNTY

County Leads The Councils of Five Districts in Proportion of Scouts to Seascouts

MEET AT MORRISVILLE

Deputy Regional Scout Executive Harry G. Nagel at Gathering

MORRISVILLE, Oct. 6—Deputy Regional Scout Executive Harry G. Nagel attended the quarterly meeting of the Shipping Board of the Bucks County Scouting Council. Among his remarks were: "Congratulations are extended to the Council on the fine accomplishment it has made in the young man program of Seascouting. Bucks County now leads the Councils in the States of Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia in the proportion of Boy Scouts to Seascouts."

The meeting was held in the offices of the Hon. Thomas B. Stockham, the Council Commodore. Mr. Stockham has a dual relationship in Seascouting through his also being the Regional Commodore. Advancement conditions were discussed by Field Commissioner of Senior Scouting A. B. Stiles, Croydon. Plans are being completed for the annual advancement ceremonies—"The Fall Bridge of Honor," to be conducted at the Sells-Perk Seascout Ship "The Ranger," Skipper F. P. Kemmerer, on Saturday evening, November 6th. A formal invitation was extended to the ship representatives by Ship Chairman A. R. Hendricks, Sellersville.

Saturday evening, November 20th, the Bristol Ship "The Elks," Skipper Fred R. Herman, will be host to all of the Ships for a championship Table Tournament contest. The recent gathering with Skipper Charles Burgess and the members of his Ship, "The Robert Morris," for an Indoor Sports Tournament, was greatly enjoyed and increased the sociability among the Seascouts. The Seascout section of the Doylestown Fair exhibit has been completely reserved for 1938 through a report of Fair progress from Skipper Charles K. Markley, Langhorne.

Scout Executive William F. Livermore analyzed the membership condition of the Ships. All of the Ships are planning a contact with their related Scout Troops to encourage the older Boy Scouts to become members. This will make it possible for younger Boy Scouts to receive the leadership opportunities made vacant by the transfer from the Boy Scout Troops to the Seascout Ships, of many older Boy Scouts who should be in a young man program.

An invitation was extended to participate in the Morrisville Constitutional celebration. Council Scout Commissioner William Burgess will represent Scouting on the committee. Field Commissioner of Training Jack Burgess and Neighborhood Commissioner Harper Stockham were present in an advisory relationship.

The delightful successful events of the National Jamboree as pertaining to Seascouting were discussed by Skipper Fred Herman and Mate Leonard Dyer. All of those who represented Bucks County want to go again. The fellowship of over 850 Seascouts and Officers was a real opportunity. To be a part of a gathering of 27,232 was a life-time experience.

Prior to the meeting Commodore and Mrs. Stockham had as dinner guests Deputy Regional Executive and Mrs. Harry G. Nagel, and Scout Executive and Mrs. William F. Livermore and Thomas and Frank Stockham.

Fire of undetermined origin yesterday afternoon damaged the store and residence of Councilman John Wichser, Dorrance street.

The blaze was discovered when Phyllis Wichser, daughter of Mr. Wichser, noticed smoke coming up the stairway to the second floor. Miss Wichser ran down to the first floor through the smoke and called her father who was working in a shop in the rear of the property.

Firemen were successful in checking the flames before they had spread to any great extent.

BUSINESS LEAVENER

Economic analysts are said to be looking to the automobile industry to send business indexes up as output goes into full swing in the production of new models. It will be late October before new models make their official bow at the New York Show. This is true notwithstanding that a few of the 1938 cars are already visible.

What renewal of automobile activity means for the whole economic structure may be surmised from the single fact that the automotive industry accounts for 20 per cent of the entire steel output of the nation. And steel is by no means the only important industry of which automobiles are the best customer. They account for the following percentages of the total output in the industries named: Plate glass, 73 per cent; upholstery leather, 46 per cent; lead, 34 per cent; nickel, 30 per cent; copper, 18 per cent; cotton, 9 per cent; hardwood lumber, 5½ per cent.

Production of the new models will get under way fast and the outlook is for high production in the fall and early winter, with perhaps something of a minor lag later in the winter.

If automobile manufacturers were inclined to be cynical they might ask the economic analysts why there should be such readiness to put upon the automotive industry the job of overcoming a business recession, if one exists or is threatened. They would undoubtedly say that they are willing to do their part, but they might also ask why not look for and demand a co-operative effort to promote and sustain business activities?

The answer to that might be that the automotive industry did such a smashing good job of leading the country out of the depression doldrums, showed such magnificent courage in the search for sound footing in what so many thought was a mere morass and had such good fortune in finding—or better yet, creating—that sound footing that it hereafter will be looked to to show the way when there is need of way-showing.

All of which, of course, is all very flattering to the automobile men, but it also is not a very neat way of dodging a responsibility that should be universal.

WAS NOT "KILLED"

Begins to look as though the G-men and the others would have to "kill" the kidnapping racket all over again. Evidently what was administered earlier was not a lethal blow. The racketeers were pretty well done in but the racket itself was only knocked for a loop.

That conclusion is warranted by the recent news of other kidnappings. Evidently the game is rich enough to attract a new lot of adventurers in the underworld.

What is happening, therefore, is merely proof that crime in none of its aspects is ever "killed." It is never more than suppressed. Racketeers come and go, but rackets go on forever.

So far as the police are concerned, from G-men up or down, the job of suppression is always with them.

Anybody can see the rottenness that needs reforming; the hard part is to overcome the nice people who are making money out of it.

A hick town is a place where they have a swell funeral because the neighbors would say catty things if they didn't.

OHIO, N. Y. CARS LEAD TOURISTS

Harrisburg—Traffic counts made for the Pennsylvania State Publicity Commission on various major highways in Western Pennsylvania show that Ohio leads the parade of states from outside the Commonwealth.

Similar checks on highways east of Harrisburg show New York ranking first with New Jersey in second place, and Ohio a close third.

A one-hour's count on the William Penn Highway, Route 22, west of Huntingdon, showed 276 out-of-State cars to 204 automobiles bearing Pennsylvania license tags. Six out of every ten foreign cars were from Ohio, New York, Michigan, and New Jersey were represented in the order named.

Two surveys made on the same highway at points between Harrisburg and Allentown showed out-of-State, 268; Pennsylvania, 476. This count represented noon-day traffic. Between 5 p. m. and 6 p. m. the proportion was 240 Pennsylvania cars to 108 out-of-State licenses.

Similar counts in other sections of the State show practically the same ratio. Concrete evidence that the Pennsylvania State Publicity Commission's program of advertising is bringing results.

All traffic counts made after Labor Day show that every state in the Union represented. In one of the counts twenty-four states were represented, including the extreme points of California and Vermont.

Several new members were welcomed during the afternoon. Plans, it was announced, will be made for the field trips next summer at meetings of the executive committee to be held late in the winter or early next spring.

With the exception of Edward R. Barnsley, of this place, who served for a number of years as vice president, all officers were re-elected as follows: President, Stephenson W. Fletcher, George School; secretary, Mrs. John B. Chambers, Newtown, and treasurer, Miss Anna S. Cliff, Langhorne. Mr. Barnsley resigned as vice president and his successors will be named by the members of the executive committee.

As this was the annual meeting, the leaders of the eight field days held during the past Summer gave interesting accounts of them.

During the business session Mrs. Edward A. Briggs, of this place, was appointed chairman of the executive committee. Other members of this committee are Mrs. George Watson, Doylestown; Miss Elizabeth A. Woodman, Wycombe; Mrs. J. Herman Barnsley, of this place; J. Kirk Leatherman, Doylestown; Mrs. E. Y. Barnes, Yardley; Miss Helen H. Ely, of this place; Lewis Sigafoos, Doylestown, and Miss Annie C. Scarborough and Miss Cora Willard, both of this place.

Miss Anna W. Smith and Mrs. Clarence E. Peters, both residing in this borough, were appointed delegates to the Delaware Valley Naturalists' Union.

the world, and that San Francisco is the logical distribution point for shipment to South and Central America and the Orient.

But the problem of creating a trade stimulant is an expensive one.

To be exact, it requires fifty million round dollars, the cost of the exposition project.

Of this amount, $6,250,000 has been provided by a federal government grant, contingent upon the future usage of Exposition Island as the San Francisco Bay Metropolitan Air Terminal.

The state of California has appropriated a total of $5,000,000, to be used in construction of buildings and exhibits portraying historical and natural attractions of the Golden State.

An additional federal appropriation of $1,500,000 is expected to go into the buildings of the federal government at the fair grounds.

The San Francisco Bay Exposition, a non-profit corporation sponsoring the fair, is raising through subscription $7,500,000. At this writing the campaign has passed the $5,000,000 mark.

Admissions, rentals, service charges will provide the remainder, to be expended directly by exhibitors and concessionaires.

As a result of the Exposition, three thousand people will have found employment through the years 1936, 1937, and 1938. An additional 10,000 persons will be employed during the Exposition.

"THE SILVER ROOD MYSTERY"

by Lewis Allen Browne

CHAPTER XXXVII

I had a couple days of rest, and appreciated it. Phil was in New York over night. When he came back he had a copy of the birth record. A girl, Nola, was born to Mrs. Nola Lutzmann on November 10, 1911, at the address of Mrs. Felder.

I was rather ashamed of myself for having neglected to look this up before. I took the information over to Judge Wentworth.

"We all often overlook the simpler things that frequently prove to be important," was his comment.

Sergeant Harper got his reports that Mr. and Mrs. Fellows seemed to be obeying orders. Aside from marketing and going out for dinner at some local restaurant, they seldom left the place. The For Sale sign had been removed.

Howard Griswold was still outwardly calm, but Mary and I both could see that he was under great mental stress. The time was nearing when he would have to go out to Illinois for his new position. He wasn't sure that he would be allowed to do this. I took it up with Harper. I felt that Foxcroft would refuse stubbornly.

"Let's wait until we see what we learn from this Professor Lardeau," Harper suggested.

I tried to cheer Griswold by telling him I was fairly sure he would not be held here.

Wednesday morning Foxcroft had a wire from his cousin, Mr. Colton. He was on his way to Greatport with Professor Lardeau. They would be out shortly after noon. I don't know how Foxcroft and Harper felt about it. I was more excited than I had been at any time since I was asked to help on the case.

Right after Foxcroft telephoned this information, Mary telephoned for me to come up. I went up through the stile along the path between my father-in-law's house and her home. She was sitting on the veranda and Davison was standing near by.

"You didn't take the silver rood, did you?" she asked.

"No. Is it gone?"

"Yes. Davison noticed that it was missing, not ten minutes ago."

We went into the library. I examined the hook where it had hung for so many years. The filament of wire was on the hook. I had carefully wound it around the rood when I hung it back, just as Harper had originally fixed it, in order to learn if anyone handled it.

"Had any visitors, Mary?" I asked.

"None."

"You didn't show anyone in here, while Miss Montieth was away, did you, Davison?"

"No sir. The rood was there yesterday afternoon. I am quite sure about that. I never go in the room but what I glance at it."

"Naturally."

"I don't want it there any longer than necessary," Mary cried. "It makes me shudder."

"Someone took it, then," I said, "between yesterday afternoon and this forenoon."

"Yes sir."

"How about the servants?"

"They know nothing about it, at least they say so, sir. I see no reason to doubt them."

"And there has been no one here, other than Miss Montieth, Mrs. Stapleton and the servants?"

"Certainly not since yesterday afternoon," Mary assured me.

"Mason was up last night, sir," Davison said.

"Up where? In here?"

"Oh no, sir, he came up around ten o'clock last night, he didn't even come in. I went out and sat with him a half hour in the service yard. Then I walked down as far as the stile with him. He came around the back way, naturally, sir."

"What do you think? I suppose you visit back and forth?"

"Occasionally, sir."

"I will see what I can learn. Meanwhile, you question the servants again, will you, Mary?"

Mary promised. I had to hurry back and get to Greatport. I was beginning to get greatly disturbed about the taking of that silver rood. For some reason, that I couldn't fathom, it struck me as having great significance.

It was two o'clock when Mr. Colton arrived at Foxcroft's office with Professor Henri Lardeau. The professor was smiling and calm, shook hands with us as Colton introduced him, and sat down quite at ease.

"I can vouch for all that Professor Lardeau will tell you, gentlemen," Colton said, "but he wants to tell it his way."

"Well, first of all, Professor," Sergeant Harper said, "give us your reason for stealing that painting."

"I did not steal it," Lardeau replied.

"What!" Sergeant Harper fairly bellowed, his eyes wide with astonishment. "You didn't steal the painting? You were there. The painting—"

"Please, gentlemen!"

Professor Lardeau held up his hand.

I shook my head at Harper.

"If you will let me tell it. It is a strange story. Mr. Colton has verified all of it. I have papers. Let us go about it quietly and then, if you wish, you may do what they call a third degree, is it not?"

Harper nodded. "Go to it," he said.

"I took the painting. I did not steal it. One cannot steal one's own property."

Foxcroft scowled.

"So it was your painting, eh?" Harper asked. One could see that he didn't believe it.

"It was mine, in a way. It belonged to my father, now dead. I inherited all that he left. Yes, it was my painting. And yet, gentlemen, it really belonged to the Swiss National Museum in Zurich."

"We seem to be getting somewhat involved, Professor," I said, to fill the silence as Lardeau looked about at us to see how we took his statement.

"We should have a stenographer," Foxcroft said, arising.

"Not necessary," Colton told him. "I have a complete typed statement for you, with other official papers."

"All right." Foxcroft turned to Lardeau. "I suppose someone told you that Mr. Gerard Montieth had stolen this painting from your father?"

"No. Oh, no, no. All by one splendid accident I found out that Mr. Montieth had it and I know now that he had every reason to believe it was his."

"It was only a copy," Foxcroft declared.

"Ha! No copy, gentlemen, I assure you. Ask Mr. Colton, long my good friend."

"I told you that Professor Lardeau wouldn't look twice at any copy," Colton reminded us.

"That painting, gentlemen," the professor assured us, "is a Van Dyck, a genuine, not a copy. It is the head of Prince Charles of England when he was a little lad, the prince who later became King Charles the second. It was done about 1635 when Van Dyck was aged thirty-six. He did a great many portraits of royalty, especially of royal children. It is of great value, very great value."

"Did you bring it back?" Sergeant Harper asked.

"Ha! Never. Why should I? It is now hanging in the Swiss National Museum where it should have been hanging twenty-five years ago."

"Let's clear this up—we aren't interested in the painting; we want to know who killed Gerard Montieth," Harper declared.

The professor became grave, instantly.

"No one wants to know more than I. When I read of it the shock nearly killed me. I was never so mortally frightened. I took ship to South America and then home, under another name. I did not kill Mr. Montieth. I did go into his library. I called again to make him another offer, then to tell him that it was not rightly his painting and that the Swiss Government would sue him for it if he refused. He was sleeping. There, through the open door to the library, hung the painting that had belonged to my father. Why, I ask myself, waste time to haggle, to fight it in the courts? Why not take what is mine and depart? Let Mr. Montieth sue if he wished, but the painting would be where it belonged."

"And Montieth woke up and tried to stop you and you had to kill him!"

The professor turned to Harper and said, with no show of alarm or fear, "That would be the natural thing to think, but it is not so."

"Will you let him tell it?" Colton urged.

"All right."

Harper sat back, sulkily.

eral and chairman of the Democratic National Committee. The charge was that it was little short of scandalous for the head of the party committee to sit in the Cabinet of the President and act as the official dispenser of Federal jobs. A great many people got quite excited about the impropriety of the Postmaster General serving as the party chairman. Newspapers generally took the view that it was "bad stuff." The practice was almost unanimously condemned. There was an immense volume of editorial denunciation and many critical speeches.

—o—

IN OTHER WORDS, there was quite a storm over the fact that Mr. Farley persisted in clinging to both jobs. The wind blew so hard that it seemed he must let go one or the other. But he didn't. As a gesture during the last campaign he did temporarily vacate his Cabinet post, but once the election was over promptly went back on the Federal pay roll. Gradually the wind ceased to blow and it has been a long time now since any newspaper, commentator, critic or politician has had a word to say on the dual position business. The subject has just worn itself out.

—o—

IT USED TO BE that hardly a week went by without some one growing indignant about this dual occupancy of jobs which clearly ought not to be held by one man, and which no one contended should be held by one man. At one time the pressure was so great the question of Mr. Farley's retirement was given serious White House consideration. But that time passed. Mr. Farley simply sat tight, smiled and rode the storm. So far as can be recalled he never defended his position—just held it. In the end people got tired talking, writing, reading about it. For nearly a year now it hasn't been mentioned—a completely forgotten issue.

—o—

IT IS A GOOD illustration of what Mr. Arthur Krock, of the "New York Times," calls "the fine art of getting away with it." For nearly five years Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Farley have "gotten away with" this manifest and concededly improper performance for a number of reasons. One is because they kept so many glittering balls in the air that it was not possible sufficiently to concentrate public attention upon the Farley situation to force action. Another reason was the very genuine popularity of Mr. Farley and the extraordinary number of friends he has even among opponents of the Administration. The fact is that while the President's "personal charm" has been far more widely ballyhooed, actually Mr. Farley's is the greater, largely because there is no trace in him of smugness and no obvious conviction of the superiority of his own wisdom and virtue.

—o—

IT MAY BE that Mr. Farley's popularity has been enhanced by his positions, but it is certainly true that he had many more personal friends than the average man before 1932, whereas Mr. Roosevelt's charm, like Mr. Coolidge's wit, was discovered only after he became President. Despite a multitude of more important public matters, it is doubtful that Mr. Farley could have gotten away with it had he been a less popular man. As it is he can afford to smile very broadly indeed. In the face of country-wide denunciation he remained undisturbedly in possession until the time came for him to cash in, which he is now about to do in a big way. The whole story is illuminating. It is a commentary upon the type of politics to which the New Deal has accustomed us and a measure of the indifference of the people.

NORRISTOWN MARKS 125TH ANNIVERSARY

Norristown — This community of 40,000 residents, Pennsylvania's largest borough, celebrated during the week of September 13 the 125th anniversary of its incorporation.

The century and a quarter of progress was observed throughout the borough by fanfare, music and pageantry, solemn religious services and community gatherings. A special edition of 48 pages, issued by the Norristown Times-Herald traced the borough's growth during the period of 125 years.

Norristown was named after Isaac Norris who bought the present site of the borough from William Penn, Jr., and Colonel William Trent—the latter, founder of Trenton, N. J.

No boom town is Norristown. Founded along the Schuylkill river at its junctions with two feeder streams—Stony creek and Saw Mill run—the borough had geographical advantages from the start. Today, as the populous seat of Montgomery county, it is larger in both population and area than many Pennsylvania cities.

Close enough to metropolitan Philadelphia and New York to have all the advantages of the biggest cities, Norristown residents still enjoy the friendliness of the small town and the facts that make suburban living attractive. In the last depression, it was one of the few sizeable towns in the State that did not have a single bank failure.

NEW YORK GIANTS ARE LACKING IN COLOR, HE SAYS

(Editor's Note: This is the 2nd of two articles by Lawton Carver on the outstanding personalities among the Yankees and Giants, who meet in the World Series beginning tomorrow. Today, the Giants.)

By Lawton Carver
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(INS)—You would have to go all the way down into the major league cellars to find a less colorful team than the New York Giants, and a quest for a less popular manager than Bill Terry would carry you even farther than that. Still—but take a look at the records.

Terry's legacy when he succeeded John McGraw, the great, in the middle of the 1932 season as manager of the Giants was a last place club. He won the pennant the very next year, dropped to second, then to third in 1934 and 1935, and has won successive pennants in the last two years.

Considering that they still pay off on results, that ought to answer everything. In five seasons he has lifted himself to a place among the great managers of all time. Take him or leave him.

In any case, he has carried into the role of manager all the ability that made him one of the game's best first basemen and hitters. Does no one appreciate him? Yes, slightly. Mr. Horace Stoneham, the young owner of the Giants, recently tore up Terry's contract which had a year to run and gave him a new one for five years at an increase in salary to $40,000 a year.

He will be 39 years old on the 30th of this month; was born in Atlanta and now lives in Memphis. With that raise in salary, he'll never run out of those foul-smelling cigars he smokes.

In contrast to the master-mind of the Giants, is the "meal ticket"—Carl Hubbell, the slim and silent southpaw, who raises pecans at Meeker, Okla., during the winter. No athletic hero ever moved through the metropolitan scene surrounded by more adulation. He beat the Yanks once last year and in his next start he and his screwball were knocked out. He opens for the Giants tomorrow.

His catcher will be Gus Mancuso, a nice pleasant fellow and a fine receiver, especially adept on low ball pitching. His assistant, if any, will be Harry (the Horse) Danning, who turned out to be one of the sensations of the Giants' stretch drive. However, he has a bad hand and probably will miss the Series.

Ranking next to Hubbell in pitching is Cliff Melton, called Mickey Mouse, because of his big ears. He stands six feet four, is one of the few rookies ever to win 20 games in his first season—as he did this year—and he figures to start the second game. He's a North Carolina mountaineer, who comes around that mounting with a curve and a high hard one.

Hal Schumacher probably will pitch the third game, he being the sinker-baller who fanned 10 Yanks in one of the games last year. They call him "Prince Hal" for no very good reason.

Long, lean and fancy-fielding Jack McCarthy will be at first base. He helped the Giants clinch the pennant when he finally began to hit. If he falters, Sam Leslie, the Mississippian who will sing if you don't watch him, will get the call. Singing Sam also hits.

At second base and shortstop you find such contrasting personalities as Burgess Urquart Whitehead, the only Phi Beta Kappa in the majors, and Rowdy Dick Bartell, the little man with the flashing spikes. They're nearly perfect, however, around that keystone bag.

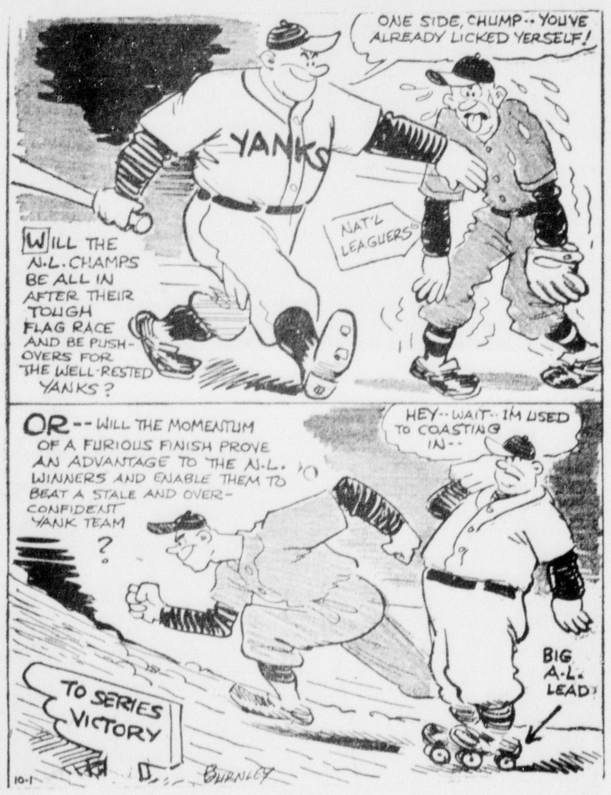

Mel Ott, who was an outfield hero at 18, is headed for stardom around third base at 28. He switched over in the stretch of the pennant race and has filled the bill. As a thrower, the youthful Louisiana veteran carries a rifle up his sleeve.

In left field is Jo-Jo Moore, so thin he scarcely makes a shadow, in right is Jimmy Ripple, called the National League "find," and in center is Lou Chiozza, the converted infielder, or Hank Leiber, who may be the hero of the series.

LEETONIA, O. — (INS) — George Woods, undertaker here, discovered recently that unknowingly he has been a "keeper of the bees" for some time. When carpenters remodeled his house they found an eight-foot square comb of honey, weighing 200 pounds, lodged between partitions.

World Series Angles

By BURNLEY

Today will witness the start of baseball's championship classic and many experts are already out on the limb, predicting another Yankee triumph.

On paper, that's the only way to figure the series. The McCarthy Maulers are unquestionably the best team in baseball at present; but that doesn't mean they will always win a short series, even against a far inferior team.

Luck, inspiration, psychology, and the current condition of the two teams will play a big part in the coming classic.

There are two important sides to the question as to the condition of the respective flag winners. The Yankees coasted home in their race, with a tremendous lead that was never threatened after mid-season. On the other hand, the National League race was a dog fight almost up to the final game of the season, with the Giants and Cubs battling tooth and nail in a close and furious scrap for the flag.

Now the angle is this: Will the torrid finish exhaust the National Leaguers and make them easy prey for the well-rested Yanks? Or, will the McCarthymen have lost their fighting edge because of lack of competition?

The National League champs, inspired to fever pitch by a close finish, might be carried by their momentum on to victory against an over-confident, success-sated and stale Yankee outfit.

RICHBORO, SOUTHAMPTON WIN IN SOCCER TILTS

By Louis Tomlinson

NEW HOPE, Oct. 6—New Hope High School went down to their second defeat in as many starts in the newly-formed Lower Bucks County soccer league here yesterday afternoon at the hands of Richboro High who, through their victory tied Southampton for first place. But at least the losers showed a much better defensive play against the visitors yesterday then against Buckingham in their opener.

Buckingham topped New Hope decisively in winning, 5-1, at Buckingham. But against Richboro, the now cellar occupants held their opponents to a lone tally which was scored with but two minutes of the game remaining to be played. The final score was 1-0.

The winning point was booted by a lad by the name of Joe Finney, who performs at center halfback for the winners. It was a beautiful toe kick which sailed through the goal on a line from the penalty zone as the home folks let out a groan.

Periods:

Richboro	0	0	0	1	—1
New Hope	0	0	0	0	—0

Goal: Finney. Time of periods: 8 min.

SOUTHAMPTON, Oct. 6—Charles Heaton, left inside of coach Claude Lodge's Southampton eleven, booted a goal from a scrimmage from in front of Yardley's goal here yesterday to give his team a victory over the visitors coached by Mike Derrick. The contest was a Lower Bucks County fray and put the winners in first place in the league standings.

Although the final score was 3-1 the teams battled on even terms for the remaining three and a half quarters in a real hard fought contest which was nip-and-tuck all the way.

Periods:

Yardley	0	0	0	1	—1
Southampton	1	0	0	2	—3

Goals: Heaton, Smith, Weiss, Brown. Time of periods: 8 minutes.

CHIEF THUNDERBIRD SEEKS SECOND TRIUMPH

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 6—Chief Thunderbird, sensational Sennach Indian, will seek his second triumph when he tangles with Jake Patterson, burly Syracuse heavyweight, in the feature wrestling match at the Trenton Arena tonight. It will be a best two fall out of three, 90 minute time limit affair.

Patterson won the right to meet Thunderbird by defeating the popular Bill Sledge last week. It was an unpopular victory and did not add lustre to Patterson. The crowd protested the decision but the verdict remained and Jake got the coveted "shot" at the Indian. Patterson is one of the roughest and toughest heavyweights ever to appear on the local scene.

The Indian made his first appearance on the opening card of the season and disposed of Eli Fischer in spectacular style. He is the most colorful newcomer to appear on the wrestling horizon in many years and experts predict that he will go far.

Carol LaRue, smooth-domed Roumanian, who is making Trenton his home, will seek to regain his winning stride at the expense of Karl Davis, rough and tough southern heavyweight.

Al Mercier, popular French Canadian, will return to the local wars against George Lenihan, Boston rowdy.

The popular Pole, Frank Bronowicz, will face Bobby Roberts, flashy youngster who stole the show last week in his match with Sammy Menacher.

The first bout will start at 8.30 p. m.

PROBE WIFE-BEATING

GADSEN, Ala.—(INS)—Alarmed by the number of divorces in Etowah County, Judge Alto B. Lee ordered the grand jury to investigate reports of excessive wife-beating. He offered the grand jury testimony in divorce cases for their study, pointing out that of 419 divorces granted in the county in eight months, 51 were for wife-beating.

WALSH THINKS GIANTS WILL WIN THE SERIES

(Note: This is the fifth and last of a series of articles by Davis J. Walsh, dealing with the two New York clubs, the Yankees and Giants, who will meet in the 1937 World Series, beginning today.)

By Davis J. Walsh
(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Oct. 6—(INS)—Broadway odds today say that, if you like the New York Yankees in the impending World Series, you must lay two dollars against the bookmaker's one. If you like the New York Giants, he will lay his eight dollars against your five.

In addition, there have been placed in circulation a series of betting cards, with 50 different combinations of possible results against which the operator is laying various prices up to 50-1. His shortest price is 6-1 against combination No. 1, which calls for the Yankees to win the series in four straight games. Against the Giants winning four straight he is laying 25-1.

Either he's crazy or I am and that goes for the Broadway price-makers, too. I think the Giants are a great bet at the odds. As a matter of fact, they aren't a bad bet at even money. I think they'll win.

Therefore, if you haven't got anything in particular against money as such, I suggest that you take some of that 8-5. There's more than a fair possibility that it won't take you. In case it does, and of course it can, you'll at least have your money running for you quite a distance, since it probably will be a seven-game series with Hubbell going in the first and fourth games. Off his Philadelphia performance on Thursday, he's almost a cinch to win and and maybe both.

I'd even say both, only you don't beat that Gomez seven days a week.

No matter what they say, I imagine our Will Terry will rush his left handers, Hubbell and Melton, in there with all haste, the idea being that the Giants don't score often and, against good left handers, the Yankees won't.

In view of this all too evident fact, I don't see how our Will can be wavering between a choice of Hubbell and Schumacher for the opening game at the Stadium today. In case he is wavering, however, I suggest that he take a little testimony from umpire Dolly Stark, who was peering at the proceedings from behind the catcher's big, red ear, in the last game that Hubbell pitched.

Stark says that was the best game he ever "worked" with Hubbell, meaning that he has never seen the guy with the pajama pants so good. If Hubbell takes that with him into the Stadium today, I won't say the Giants are positively "in," but they'll be awful close—Gomez or no Gomez. Even in his greatest years—and this has been one of them—the latter has never been a tremendous World Series pitcher and Hubbell has. I think our Will is likely to remember that when the time comes.

The idea about Schumacher pitching one of those early games at the Stadium is that the lights there are deceptive at this time of year and Hal's low stuff is hard to see. However, Melton shouldn't be held back too long. He might worry over an opening game assignment, but probably he would worry more if he was kept waiting until the third game.

However, maybe it wouldn't be a third grade idea if I let our Will run his own club. There haven't been any complaints so far and, as I have been trying to say over a period of days, it seems by far to be the hotter club of the two.

It's also a better club than 1933 Giants who won a World's championship—and far better than the 1936 outfit. The Yanks are definitely not as good as they were then. Better pitching, especially from Gomez; but Crosetti and Lazzeri aren't hitting and neither is Powell, the 1936 Series "hero."

Selkirk, out for months, is uncertain at this time and he never was too good against left-handers.

The thing that has carried the Yankees through has been the sustained and violent hitting of DiMaggio, Gehrig and Dickey, with the latter being singled out by rival managers as the man they fear the most.

If all three hit this time as they did during the regular season, they'll certainly carry the Yankees through the series.

But at 8-5, I'm not only willing but determined to say that they won't.

BENSALEM WINS OVER JENKINTOWN ELEVEN

By Louis Tomlinson

JENKINTOWN, Oct. 6—Coach George Reimer's Bensalem Owlettes drove down to the two-yard line of the subvarsity eleven of Coach "Gloomy Bill" Dougherty in the first minute of play in their game here yesterday, but the forward wall of the home team stood off the visitors' offensive and kicked out of danger.

From that point throughout the rest of the fray it was a nip and tuck battle fought closely and hard by both teams. Neither side same near to their opponents' danger zone for the rest of the 45 minutes of play remaining. Then with but three minutes of the contest yet to be played before the final whistle was to blow ending the tilt, Bensalem pushed over two touchdowns that netted themselves a victory over Coach Dougherty's junior varsity eleven. Adding the extra point to the last touchdown, Bensalem finished up on the long end of a 13-0 score.

Score by periods:

Bensalem	0	0	0	13	—13
Jenkintown	0	0	0	0	— 0

Touchdowns: Cahill, Hill.
Point after touchdown: Cahill.
Time of periods: 12 minutes.

ST. ANN'S SQUAD GIVEN LONG DRILL BY COACH

Coach "Bill" Dougherty sent his St. Ann's A. A. gridsters into a long drill last night in preparation for their home opening which will take place on the local gridiron Sunday afternoon, with the Morrisville Tigers being the opposing club.

The "Saints" are having quite a bit of difficulty in breaking into the win column and Coach Dougherty is banking on the team to take over the Morrisville clan, most of whom played on teams of the Morrisville high school which were coached by Jake Hoffman.

"Jimmy" McCahan, a new-comer to the St. Ann's team, joined the squad and practiced at one of the wing posts. McCahan's usual position is tackle, but as the "Saints" are weak at end, he has consented to play this position. McCahan will also be used to do some punting as he averages 40 to 50 yards on a kick.

Mid-County Soccer League Joins Conference

Hockey and Basketball Leagues. They will organize to form this circuit in December at the next meeting. The men, however, will have no jurisdiction over the league. They must organize, meet, and decide their own questions and problems.

A third development of the meeting was to the effect of allowing Bristol to remain in the Lower Bucks Football Conference by playing only three games. The ruling was to the effect that each school must play at least four of the six conference teams, but since Yardley dropped out, and Newtown and Bensalem refused to play Bristol in football, they could only schedule three conference tilts—Langhorne, Fallsington and Morrisville. In this predicament the coaches voted to allow Bristol to remain in the conferenec with only a three game conference schedule.

The meeting was called primarily to discuss the baseball schedule for the Upper and Lower Divisions of the Lower Bucks County league, but this was the least accomplished. In fact the appointment of Coaches Reimer of Bensalem and Derrick of Yardley to draw up a baseball schedule for the 1938 season to submit to the coaches for approval of in the December meeting was the only thing done along that line.

Election of officers for the 1937-38 season was the concluding bit of business on the schedule. Those elected were: President, James Doheny, Fallsington; vice president, Claude Lodge, Southampton; secretary - treasurer, George Reimer, Bensalem.

The election of Doheny for president to replace the veteran of that job, Charles Beck of Langhorne, who held the position for five or six years, was the only change in the officers for the 1937-38 year. At the same time Buckingham High School was elected member of the Lower Bucks County Conference. Incidentally, Buckingham joined the Lower Bucks County Basketball circuit for the 1938 season, adding a new member to the circuit. They open their season with Bristol High at Buckingham on January 4.

Those schools present and their representatives were: Bensalem, Reimer; Bristol, Juenger, Utz; Fallsington, Doheny, DeRisi; Buckingham, Hessler, Carver; Langhorne, Beck; Morrisville, Scott, Coulm; Richboro, Luff; Southampton, Lodge; Yardley, Derrick. New Hope and Newtown were not represented.

The Giants' First Line of Defense

Here are the men who will plug the gaps in the infield for the Giants when they play the Yankees in the World Series, in New York. Left to right are: Burgess Whitehead, second baseman; Mel Ott, third baseman; Sam Leslie, substitute first baseman; Dick Bartell, shortstop; and John McCarthy, first baseman.
